In case you didnâ™t know, Daydreams by Swedish artist Hanna Karlzon was first published as DagdrÃ¶mmar in May 2015 by Swedish publisher Pagina FÃ¶rlag. It was majorly exciting news when, in February 2016, Hanna Karlzon announced that US publisher Gibbs-Smith got reprinting rights for all her books!! Sometimes when a publisher gets reprinting rights the quality is just not the same as the original. But that is most definitely not the case here. I am very happy to report that US publisher Gibbs-Smith has created an exact replica of the Swedish edition of DagdrÃ¶mmar. The English edition has a mint green hardcover with a cloth spine and stunning gold foiling accents on the front and back covers and spine. And the paper is the same too â” Gibbs-Smith sourced the paper (Munken Pure 160 gsm) from the same paper mill that Pagina FÃ¶rlag uses! Now, letâ™s talk about the inside of Day Dreams. Hannaâ™s art is beautiful and the imagery has such a magical fantasy vibe â” itâ™s like a glimpse into another world. Thereâ™s keys and keyholes, mounds of flowers tumbling out of chimneys, houses sprouting from flower centers, bejeweled crowns, curious cats, speckled mushrooms, seashells and sealife, decorated insects, birds, beautiful women, homes rising up from the back of a cat, exotic flowers, animals wearing crowns, bumblees carrying jewels, owls with mushrooms sprouting from their bodies, and so much more. Day Dreams contains three non-coloring pages where colorists are instructed to add their own designs to the page. What I love most about Hannaâ™s art, is that each image tells its own story. It makes the coloring experience really special. I can zone out and just focus on the experience of choosing colors and laying down color on the page.
