This is a small format book that is primarily a devotional guide. Each day (including February 29th for leap year) has a quote of the words of Jesus, a guide about what the words mean and how to apply them in your life, a quote or suggested activity, and a small coloring project as well. Most pages have some lines in which you can journal your thoughts, etc. I am really enjoying this book. I keep it on the end table near where I have my morning tea, along with a small set of coloring pencils. I start my day with the book and it is perfect for setting the tone of the day and giving me something to think about instead of getting caught up in the grind and hassles that spring up and try to grab your attention. It is helping keep me grounded and remembering what is most important. I generally provide a video of my coloring books but this book is an exception as it is more devotional than coloring book. I will provide a few photo samples so you can see the format as well as a couple of my last pages I have completed in the book. I did test the book and this is what I found: 366 pages of daily devotional and coloring pages in a small (but thick) take-along size book. Printed on both sides of thin, white, slightly rough, non-perforated paper. Sewn Binding Alcohol and water-based markers all leak through to some degree (except Tombows brush end which left a colorful shadow on the back of the page.) India ink pens left colorful shadows on the page of the page. Gel pens did not leak through but some (Tekwriter and Fiskars) left shadows when using dark or bright colors.) Coloring pencils work well with this paper. Both oil and wax based pencils put down good color with both a light and firm touch. They both layered well.
