Customer Reviews

I was happy to find this Harry Potter kit recently. I was a bit surprised to find out how small these were (given the size listed in the description.) I think that the larger dimensions must refer to the cardboard box when it is fully open, as the cards are much smaller. I'll provide details on the components below. The designs are very small with detailed coloring elements. I suggest only small nib coloring medium with this kit. I consider it a fun kit for any Harry Potter fan. They remind me of exchangeable cards that have been popular over the years. I used only the included pencils on my first project and I used each one of them at least once. I found that the pencils went on very light. So light, I had to layer multiple coats of light blue and light green for them to show up at all. I think a kid could have fun with the kit as is but for me, I will use other coloring medium for the rest of the cards. I will provide details about the physical kit below, but here is a quick overview of what I found:

30 Harry Potter designs in playing card size
Printed on one side with high glossy back
Cardboard box holds entire set
Folds open and closes with magnet
Two folding magnetic frames for holding finished artwork
Alcohol and water based markers and India ink pen did not bleed through Gel pens did not bleed through but some required extra drying time
Coloring pencils did well but no room for blending in minute details
The kit contains 30 design cards which are mostly character cards and measure 3 3/8 x 2 7/16 inches. The cards have the appearance of playing cards with a matte front and a high glossy coated decorated back.
